BOUT WITH TOM RYAN

It was reported that Joseph Gans has shown willingness to take Tommy Ryan, who styles himself as a "lightweight" champion, in a twenty round mill. Ryan is permitted to cut the purse up to his liking.

Ryan has repeatedly offered to fight the heavyweights and middleweights either 154 pounds (or 154 pounds, ring-side), or 160 pounds. Ryan has said that under these conditions have apparently kept him from fighting Gans. But if Gans goes in to fight Ryan, he will have to make a condition that will serve as an obstacle to match. He would probably insist on having the idea that Ryan could have a distinct advantage over Gans in actual weight, cut Gans is quoted as saying it is not a fair fight. Ryan is said to be fighting Ryan, however. Gans was probably built up in his training so to speak, and he is said to be weighing perhaps 144 pounds of bone and muscle.

HARVARD, '09, OUTDOORS.
The freshman baseball squad of Harvard held its first practice out in the open yesterday afternoon on the regular freemason's diamond. The work was very practical, much below the standard set thus far by the college. This was largely accounted for by the worst condition of the diamond, which was so bogged down that the players were lost about forty-five minutes under the coaching of "Reddie" Grant, the law school.

after that—until Britt got that question about decision over time. He wasn't brash that night, but the fact of his losing the decision broke his heart, and that was the same "Young Corbett" again.

But he had been a loser, but that was the force he got on top. Let him lose now, and it would seem a flatting Dane who is as tall as a leech, they may think they are terrible, but they are not.

Ferry McInerney since his defeat at the hands of Young Corbett has not been the same, fearless little fighter. I remember when he met Corbett for the second time out in Prince among the Corns. He was not the charging little terror that he formerly was. This night he crunched his shoulders.

his face and all in all showed great fear of Corbett, who talked and jabbed Terry in a tantalizing manner. Terry's nerve was gone. He knew that Corbett had the number.

At Philadelphia he showed the same fear. It isn't the fear of a ticking. Terry doesn't care a rap about the beating. He is the fear of losing that was in his soul. Fighters who are on top scarcely think of this. They are so awed up by their own strength that they don't think of this. They think there is no one in the world who has it on them. This makes them tougher and more confident than they should really be.

Nelson never dreamed of losing to Terry. He had the gall of a burglar, and let Terry know it.

It was a queer fight for Terry to lose.

He thought that night the way opposed to fight him in other days. He waited for Nelson to rush, grabbed his arm to hold as long as he could, and then he lunged and blew water than to glide and to. Occasionally he slugged, but it was only when he had to. He didn't rush the 150 lbs off his feet, as he did opponents in his first days.

Nelson would have knocked Terry out four rounds easily if there had been clinching. He was too strong, too aggressive, too heavy and too good a manager to mix with.

Terry will beat a bunch of other guys, but he will never be the Terry of that best down Frank Bruce and Gene Nelson, never in a million years. He will NEVER come back.

WALTER CLARKSON HAS A NEW TWISTER

BIRMINGHAM, March 31.—It seems Walter Clarkson has had his delivery up his sleeve, but was afraid to try any new wrinkles with his arm until the weather began as chilly as it was yesterday. Clarkson, who has been in the game for a new thing, but he, too, kept it under cover. The delivery is a slow one, to mix in with the fast ones, and to keep the pitcher off the batsman and appears to rise a bit at first; then it takes a sudden kinky drop, and becomes a "fadeaway," with a slight curve to the right.

Clarkson has named it the "set." It gives the pitcher a chance to get a jump on him, takes the sudden drop and out the series, but relied almost entirely on the drop and fadeaway. Was Matt's faultless and perfect control that brought him the nod? It was the delivery that won. "The Old Fox" put on his thinking cap, and decided to try the delivery that had reached last Winter they put the delivery in the hands of the pitcher. The delivery

Clarkson has the follow-up in the "set" of "tenpins," but he was not the speed mix it in with a swift shoot, which is also a new thing. Clarkson's delivery is a good one of effectiveness, so, as Clarkson has been in the game for a while, he has won Fox, and the result was Clarkson's surprise. The players in the game yesterday

Clarkson has not tried it in a game yet. It is a new thing, but it is a good one.

MISS ORMOND A STAR FOOTBALL RULES ARE RAKED OVER NATIONAL GOLF LINKS

There is bound to be plenty doing at the racing grounds of John F. Fitzgerald at Kneeland street business man, during training season. While the string of sales only three horses, yet the quality was better than makes up for quantity. Miss Ormond, 2:10½, the pacing mare, gave all of the boys a headache. The Dover meeting last Fall is the story of the lot. It is expected that a very big crowd will see her again. The trotting horse Baron Patch, 2:18½, never looked in his shape. He has been backward lately since coming from the West. Much was the cause of his poor showing. His racing strategy is now being worked out by his trainer, Mr. Green Postor, Jr., Director, 2:05½, the green trotter that Mr. Fitzgerald bought at a long price at the Readville sale in 1927. It would not be surprising to find a touch 2:12 during the Summer.

In charge of these horses is Frank Rombert, who made a reputation in the turf world as a trainer of champions. He is 42 years old, 2-02, in the pink of condition, and is running a pretty good campaign. He is proud to say that Hobbs will take his horses to the Middleboro (Mass.) half mile track for the first time in his career. He has been here for 10 years to L. Lauer and H. B. Searles, and he is now in the hands of the late Middleboro. It is his intention to enter the track in three successive days to work out the horses.

Trainer Phil Collins has been engaged to come to handle the horses. He is 37 years old, 5-10, 140 lbs., and has been in the game for 10 years; two by Alerton, 2-09, the first of his geldings, and 1-13, a second year gelding. He has a third year gelding, Red Elm, 2-13, and a fourth year gelding, Frank, 2-04, with which he is working.

Phil Collins will have the pair of geldings Frank, 2-04, and Red Elm, 2-04, and will have the pair of fillies, Hobbs, 2-04, and her owner, Jerry Sullivan, believe me, will be getting about 2-04 or 2-05 when the Grand Circuit hits this way.

There have been published from time to time the views of former Yale players and Harvard players, Princeton players and Pennsylvania players regarding the best way to improve football. This article contains the views of a former West Virginia player. Lloyd Stinson, a former West Virginia star, now stationed at Fort Hamilton, played football for ten years, first at high school and five years at West Point. He played three years at West Point, as a fullback, and then as a halfback and as captain of the team in his last year. He has seen the game through the three revolutions of the game through twenty years," he says, "it that it was designed to be played by men in blue. I remember that when I first started to play, the line was a solid line, with an occasional player at the center. That was before we got to the college line, with the center and the fullback and the halfback and the quarterback. "Nevertheless there is a limit to open play, and I don't believe in rule that would reject the game to star players here. I think the development of heavy

“With the rule allowing one fireman to drop back, the team will undoubtedly use the fireman in ground-gain situations to get the team back on when you're within striking distance either a good drop blocker or a back blocker. The rule also allows a fireman six yards to remain in the line on a fourth down. The rule also allows the team to bound to lift the opposing end. The new game will develop strong ends and defensive linemen, and I think that the man who drops back from the defensive line will have to guard the line. He will have to guard the extremities, and the tackle, having the hardest time of it, will have to guard the most ground of any lineman, or not afford to leave their positions. The rule does not set a rule, it sets a for a free, aggressive line. That has always been the case.”

NEW YORK, March 31.—Charles B. Macdonald of this city, who went to Europe in January, reports that the proposed American Golf course at Asolo will certainly be founded. He has secured nearly 100 subscribers at $1,000 each, and it seems as good as settled that the new course will be laid out somewhere on Long Island.

Walter J. Travis of Garden City, L. I., has received a letter from Macdonald, written recently when he was in London, in which he was asked to act as American representative of the project. In his letter:

"The project for building a national golf course is being advanced with all possible speed compatible with the necessity of raising the necessary funds. The project has been considered in America and Great Britain, several sites have been considered, and the chief difficulties are the expense of the long distances from New York.

"In the meantime I am making it my business to gather together all the re-that the national American course, when completed, may combine the best features of the classic links in England and Scotland. It is impossible to settle the details of the nature of the eighteen holes until the matter has been fully discussed, but it has been decided and the whole matter has been discussed in the press in both countries.

"I intend to devote two months to the study of the classic links in England and Scotland on this side of the Atlantic and shall return in June, when I return in June, to bring back to the United States the best of all the best links in the country, so that we may be able to evolve a scheme for a national course, which will not only be far superior to any of the classic links in America, but will surpass in classic and first golfing quality even the classic links in England and Scotland.

"We shall then be able to proceed at once to the construction of the links and the construction of the links.

Metropolitan Driving Club affairs are beginning to hustle along for the Spring members season to start at the Charles River Speedway. Only a few days more of good weather and the course will be filled every afternoon with the members getting the horses in condition to face the starting judge.

The organization is doing all in its power to have matters run smoothly when the time arrives. The club has been incorporated, and the house on the speedway has been formally turned over by the former owners. The directors have announced that they will have committees their dues, and
